Besides the large quantity of ammu-nition stored in the after compartment of the ship, several hundred rounds of of the ship, several hundred rounds of shrapnel shots for the use of the field artillery were lying on the dock near the vessel ready to be loaded into the hold. When the work of loading the vessel ceased last night, this was fortunate; otherwise, this highly dangerous stuff would have been added to the many dangers the firemen and crew of the Meade had to face. the Meade had to face.

Some Acts of Heroism. .

Perhaps pre-eminent in the ranks of the heroes of the fire, was J. M. Mc-Closkey, of engine company No. 4, striving to his utmost with his fellows fighting the flames. He was overcome and carried to the dock. There he eard that his captain, behind whom e had fought so many other fires, was he had fought so many other hres, was still in the hold, overcome by gas, and in danger of death. He staggered back on board the Meade, although others tried to restrain him, and at the foot within a week or two. f the ladder which Chief Sullivan had laced in the hatchway, leading into the rward hold, he discerned through the oiling smoke, the bowed and still form f Captain Dakin. He went down into under his arms, bent at all hazards up-work until at last he was carried away unconscious.

The first hint at a cause for the fire was mentioned by Captain Comstock of the fire underwriters patrol, early this morning, who said that in his polinion the fire was undoubtedly caused by some one smoking among the baggage and carelessly throwing a fighted cigar or cigarette among the inflammable matter there. He also declared that the fire started in the baggage and not in the coal bunkers.

Outside the damage to ship and cargo, the chief sufferers will be the army officers, whose personal effects were destroyed in the shape of baggage and family effects stored in the compartment near where the fire broke out.

PARTRIDGE VS. QUAIL CONTROVERSY AGAIN

W. B. Hibbs stated today that the report that he had about closed a deal for the purchase of the old Barton Hotel property was inaccurate. Mr. Hibbs admitted that he had been looking at the Barton and other investment sites of a similar character with a view to purchase, and that he had made an offer for the former. His offer has not, however, he said, been accepted and he had no reason to suppose that it will be accepted.

One of the owners of the Barton property resides in Figure 1. To the Sporting Editor of The Times:

In your issue of January 22, Mr. Butler is reported to have said that the bird we call partridge is a quail. Now, if he will study the habits of the two birds he will find a great dissimilarity, in one particular. Quails, the world over, are polygamous, and partridges over, are polygamous, and partridges over, are polygamous. This distinction clearly determines their classification. Because we have no partridge in this country exactly like the European bird does not warrant our bird being called a quail. To the Sporting Editor of The Times: warrant our bird being called a quail Partridges all over Europe and in Africa differ variously, in color and call par bird has a call peculiarly his own—Bob White, used by the male only as a solace 'EM, SAYS HEALTH OFFICER to his mate whilst incubating; but that does not debar him from being of the partridge family.
